Christmas time fatalities... no deadline is worth someone's life!

We know that the lead-up to Christmas is busy with employers and workers rushing to complete projects and meet deadlines. But it is a horrifying fact that workers are more likely to die in November and December than any other time.

Almost 25 per cent of all work place fatalities occur at this time.

No deadline is worth someone's life, so we are asking everyone to think about safety. The safest work place is the one where employers and workers stop and take the time to think about the work they will be doing, and plan to do it as safely as possible.

Don't allow your work site to become a Christmas statistic.

Make workplace safety your number one priority.
